The Crucible is a spin-off of Shakespeare's The Taming of the Shrew. It is a modern play written by Garland Fuller and directed by David York, with music by Alan Muckelroy. The Crucible is set during the height of McCarthyism in 1950 in the fictional State of Ohio in the U.S. of America. It explores the rise of the witch-hunts and related phenomena and examines some of their irrational and subversive aspects. It tells of the truth of a young woman's accusations of being a witch, the ruin of her mother, the lawyer who defends her, the injustice of a trial and the interweaving of the lives of a family. by Roma Silbiger (1906-1996) The Quotations' Queer Eye: In the year 2003, Roma Silbiger, who was the classical singer, was diagnosed with dementia by a doctor and moved in with her companion Rutha. During the last ten years of her life, Rutha gave a lecture about Roma and the lecture was published as "The Quotations' Queer Eye" (2003). The talk is about the image of classical singers. After the initial talk, Rutha and Roma met with performers from the Berlin State Opera. by Elisabeth Walther, Ehrenfried Pfeiffer (1800-1859): Good morning, Bonaparte. by Friedrich Wilhelm II (1775-1840): Forward, march, gentlemen, forward! by Ernst Moritz Arndt (1769-1860): Take care of the richest man and the poorest man, for all are the same: both want to be well cared for. by King Leopold II (1795-1868): Only perfect order could ensure lasting peace. by Otto von Bismarck (1815-1898): Not a house in Germany is without a picture of the Kaiser. by Franz Liszt (1811-1886): I have always had a great respect for fidelity. Where there is no love, there can be no fidelity. by Napoleon III (1808-1873): To love well is to serve the state well. by Andreas Hofer (1683-1751): You live as in a dream. [4] The above cases, however, do not preclude the discretion of the trial court to exclude photographs where other evidence gives a clear idea of the facts that are sought to be established. This discretion is quite broad and should be exercised liberally. (People v. Greer, supra, 30 Cal.2d 589, 602; People v. Simmons (1962) 200 Cal. App.2d 221, 231 [19 Cal. Rptr. 161].) In the instant case the trial court properly ruled that the photographs were admissible in evidence. The photographs of the deceased and of the injuries inflicted, which were not inflammatory, were relevant and material to the question of the manner in which the assault was committed. The order denying defendant's motion for new trial is affirmed.
