Videos Artists Blondie are an American band that were formed in New York in 1976 by singer-songwriter Deborah Harry and guitarist Chris Stein. The band originally consisted of Harry, Stein, bassist Clem Burke, and drummer Patrick MacNeil. Later, Marcus Miller replaced Burke and James McMullen replaced MacNeil. They are known for their combination of punk rock, new wave, and disco music, and for their catchy hits that peaked in the US Billboard Hot 100 between 1978 and 1982. After a four-year hiatus in the mid-1980s, Blondie released two studio albums in the 1990s. Blondie again experienced significant international success with their 1999 album No Exit, their only studio release in nearly 20 years. Harry and Stein remained together as a duo until August 2015, after which they were replaced by guitarist Chris Bullock and drummer Roger Moutenot. Current status: The band still has active members; Stein is a successful film composer and producer, and Harry serves as an occasional songwriter for other musicians, while both have acted in films. In 2015 they reunited for a set of special shows with Roger Moutenot. Current members: Deborah Harry (vocals), Chris Stein (guitars), James McMullen (drums)
