FLV-Media Player is an application supposed to help you play FLV files on the go and although it doesn't support other popular video formats, it tries to promote a different approach in handling the FLV extension. You will then get to meet a very clean interface that doesn't assault the user with too many options, but still hides a lot of features under its menus. FLV-Media Player can open saved Flash movies, but you can also use it for playing online videos. Every time you open a new FLV file, the tool will open a balloon tray notification to show you some stats regarding the video, including path, duration, resolution, and framerate. Does not have an extensive settings window The number of options is not too impressive though, as many other full-featured video players already include them. For example, it has automatic rewind, a loop movie tool, smoothing, sleep-time, peak-meter, an automatic start feature and some other goodies to control the video. Moreover, the tool includes several features that can make video watching more convenient and enjoyable, such as the automatic rewind and start, for instance. In case you want to set this application as the default FLV player, there is a dedicated feature you can find under the Options menu. FLV-Media Player runs low on computer resources so that it can be safely used on older machines as well.
